JARED R. SUGERMAN, ASSOCIATE

OVERVIEW

Jared Sugerman focuses his practice on business and corporate law, and is also active as a part of both the employment law team and the intellectual property and technology law team. He frequently advises clients on issues related to trade secrets and confidential information, as well as data security.

Jared was part of a major, multi-faceted, year-long transaction in the cannabis space. He has also worked with several investor groups on matters involving the raising of capital. Additionally, Jared counsels clients in disputes concerning a variety of matters, including insurance coverage.

During the COVID-19 crisis, Jared researched and authored blog posts and articles on a variety of critical topics including: workplace health and safety, business interruption insurance, and the workshare program by the Rhode Island Department of Labor & Training. He co-authored an article in Providence Business News on "WorkShare is option for R.I. businesses in crisis."

Prior to joining Duffy & Sweeney, he spent two years at a local Rhode Island law firm and one year at the Rhode Island Superior Court where he served as the Clerk for the business calendar. He is admitted to practice law in Rhode Island and Massachusetts.

Jared is active in the community on the Providence Preservation Society Winter Bash Committee. He is a graduate of the University of Michigan Law School and Northeastern University.

COMMUNITY

Jared is a member of the Board of Trustees and the governance committee for the Providence Preservation Society. He is chair of the PPS development committee and active in planning the Winter Bash event.

He was formerly active as a Board Member of the College Hill Neighborhood Association and as pro bono counsel to the Mile of History Association, a group of stakeholders – residents, neighbors, institutions, and businesses – interested in assuring a safe, healthy and vibrant community.
